Go Ask Alice!

Go Ask Alice! is a fantastic health resource. The website is maintained by health educators at Columbia University, and it is set up in a Q&A format. The sexual health topics are great. If someone has a question, chances are that the folks at Go Ask Alice! have heard it before and have a great answer already on hand. You can submit questions, too! They also answer questions about nutrition, alcohol/drugs, sexuality, relationships, and mental health.

Centers for Disease Control

This website is a thorough resource for information about sexually transmitted infections. The CDC has excellent fact sheets that clearly explain prevention, transmission, and symptoms.

Visit Site [16]

American Social Health Association

ASHA offers information about sexually transmitted infections. Their site offers an "ask the experts" section and a message board monitored by STI experts.

Visit Site [17]

Planned Parenthood

Planned Parenthood's "Health Topics" include excellent explanations of different options for birth control.

Scarleteen: Sex Education for the Real World

The folks at Scarleteen are health educators who provide real-world sexual health information. One of the best features of the website is the "Got Questions? Get Answers" discussion board, where people can ask questions about sexual health and a trained sex educator will respond.
